To whom it may concern,

I am writing to apply for the advertised Emergency Management Assistant student position at the Ontario Public Service Careers. I have studied the job description, and, given my combination of education-based expertise and lived work experience, I believe I am extremely well qualified for this position.

The role of an emergency management professional is central to the safety and vitality of the Province of Ontario. This person has the capacity to manage high-pressure situations while maintaining professional competency, both in a preventative and mitigative capacity. To be effective, this person must possess the expertise to diligently understand emergency-related information processes while recognizing the tender nature of 'emergency' itself. Ontario Public Service Careers is at the forefront of cultivating young leaders who embody these qualities because they understand the value of safeguarding the future of Ontario.

As an undergraduate Information Sciences student at the University of Toronto (U of T), I am studying process innovation and information translation. I have spent two years pursuing various data analysis projects which explore such concepts while working with Student Engagement at U of T. Most recently, I worked individually on the Clubs/Organizations Student Leader Experience project, as you will see on my resume. The results of this project measurably improved communication between the institution and student leaders, as evidenced by a lower rate of formal complaints and inquiries. This proves that the efficacy of the message is tied to its material delivery

Understanding the complexities of information as it exists within emergency management has therefore been of great interest to me because I know that this is work that creates value and enables success. That is the kind of environment where I thrive, and that is why I am truly excited at the prospect of joining Ontario Public Service Careers.

I would be delighted to discuss my candidacy further with you. I look forward to hearing from you at your convenience, and I thank you in advance for your consideration of my application.

Sincerely,

Brooklin Becker
